Chapter 2 by Coraline Castell

Time took the trade to the thin trail thrown trough them. Tactfully the trade tensed thanks to them. To that they thought:

"Thoroughly thought."

Traps tried to thicken the trama; the traitor tilted the throat to think, thirsty.

"They think thickly through their threats. Tonight, time takes the turbulence."

Tomorrow, treasures; today, thoughts.

Chapter 4 by PikaWrester

Wit wins with what wit wants. Without wisdom, wondering wistfully wishes welter within wanhope. Whilst whenever waterish waxcloth wanes, wayment with wistly, witless worwood wakes with wonderment, whereas washland withers when winter wirbles. When, without wisdom, will widows with widowers wither, without wasting why we win? Wherever we will walk, we will walk we wisdom, we will walk with wonderment, we will walk with wight.
